

Sydney Morning Herald, Sydney
12 May 2012, by Sue White

Careers, page 33 - 70.36 cm²
Capital City Daily - circulation 184,613 (MTWTFS-)

ID 145710147

PAGE 1 of 1

CHART A COURSE

Home learning so much easier

Course Diploma of building and construction (building)

Construction workers may be in high demand but those looking to formalise their qualifications as they move up the ladder can find making the time for study a challenge.

"There is a mass skills shortage in the building and construction space," says the managing director of construction training provider Transformed, Michael Young. "Construction supervisors and managers are required to obtain relevant building qualifications and licences ... but many workers are time-poor and find it hard to study within normal office hours."

The solution? A nationally recognised, competency-based qualification using e-learning and self-paced study. "The NBN rollout means we can deliver the course via high-speed broadband to provide experiential learning about workplace safety on a construction site," Young says.

Cost $3960-$4400.

Duration Self-paced study. The course can be completed within six months.

Time At your convenience, through individual study and online learning.

Where From home, with coaching support via phone and email.

When Year-round start.

Link transformed.com.au.

SUE WHITE